

Dali image of Castor and Pollux, together known as the Dioscuri. Pollux was given the choice by Zeus of giving half his immortality to his mortal brother. He opted for the latter and the brothers became the two brightest stars in the constellation Gemini as emblems of immortality and death. Castor and Pollux appear on the top of the Dali house in Port Lligat (Spain). Photo © Anne Burke.